"Yah" in everyday language -- breaking the third commandment

Dear …

I recently emailed a number of people with Yxxoo email addresses to caution that this name is very close to the true name of our Almighty Father "Yah" or "Yahooeh" and advising them to obtain an alternative email address as I am concerned that Yxxoo breaks the third commandment not to take the name of Yah the eternally self existing (Yahooeh or Yahweh) in vain.

One of the people i mailed replied thanking me and pointing out that a word sounding very similar to Yah is regularly used in English for yes and i then realized that the Afrikaans word for yes, "ja" also sounds the same, as do words for yes in other languages.

It seems to me that one should seek to avoid using words that sound like "Yah" in any language as it is possible that the forces of darkness have inserted these words into common usage in order to trick as many as possible into breaking the third commandment.

Warm regards and blessings,

James Robertson
